

About the Administrative Fairness Lab

The Administrative Fairness Lab - led out of the Dickson Poon School of Law, King's College London and York Law School, University of York - is an interdisciplinary research group dedicated to advancing understanding of administrative justice.

In addition to working across social security, social care, mental health services and the tribunals system, the Lab has undertaken research with civil servants on the commencement of the socio-economic duty in the Equality Act 2010.

You can read more about the Lab's work at:

<https://www.administrativefairnesslab.com/>